

Fewer people are waiting for hospital treatments in England. The list went from 7.42 million in March to 7.39 million in April.

The government will give the NHS more money. NHS staff are working hard, but many patients wait longer due to a lack of social care.

People wait long in emergency rooms. Lack of social care slows hospitals. The government uses quick fixes, but experts want lasting change.