

Protecting the Mashco Piro Tribe

The Mashco Piro live in the Amazon and avoid outside contact. They hunt with bows and arrows. Nearby villages respect and protect their way of life.

Logging and mining can harm groups like the Mashco Piro. These can ruin homes and bring diseases. Some areas are not protected by the government.

Mashco Piro ask for food at Nomole but don't want to join the outside world. A new road nearby worries those who want to keep them safe.
