

Billy Boston, a famous rugby player, will get a knighthood at Buckingham Palace. He was a star in the 1950s and 1960s.

Rugby league players haven't had knighthoods. Some say it's due to snobbery. Lisa Nandy says this honour matters for the sport's history.

Billy, with dementia, will attend the ceremony with family. He played rugby for Wigan and Great Britain. The community is happy he's being recognised.
