

A small gold coin from the 7th Century was found near Norwich. It shows a man with a cross and a symbol linked to the Norse god Odin.

A metal detectorist found a special gold coin with Christian and pagan designs from when people were moving to Christianity.

Norwich Castle Museum wants to keep the coin. A coroner will decide if it's treasure. UK law helps museums show important finds to the public.