

Erin Patterson is on trial in Australia. She cooked a lunch that led to three deaths. She says it was an accident, but prosecutors think it was on purpose.

Erin made beef Wellington to thank her family. Some people got very sick, and some died from poisonous mushrooms in the meal.

Erin didn't tell doctors about mushrooms as guests were treated. She got rid of a food dehydrator out of fear. The court heard about family issues.

The trial has lasted over six weeks. Erin denies the claims. She's still being questioned, and the trial will go on for two more weeks.