

A painting by Turner, "The Rising Squall," was lost for over 150 years. It shows Bristol and was his first public oil painting. It was found last year.

The painting will be in London from 28 June to 1 July. It might sell for £300,000. First shown in 1793, it was bought by a friend of Turner's dad.

Experts now know "The Rising Squall" is Turner's first oil painting. He made it when he was young and travelling from London to the West Country.