

Indigenous Peoples and Climate Change

Indigenous Peoples protect nature but get little help for climate change. They are often left out of important talks. This is not fair and needs to change.

Indigenous knowledge helps solve climate problems. In Peru and Somalia, old land care methods help with new challenges. They should be respected and used.

Indigenous Peoples face problems like being left out of climate plans. They need more support and should lead actions to protect their lands and rights.