

Zia Yusuf called a social media row a "storm in a teacup". He regretted calling an MP's burka ban idea "dumb". He quit but returned to a new role.

MP Sarah Pochin asked about banning the burka. Yusuf, a Muslim, was upset as it wasn't policy. He might support banning all face coverings in public.

Kemi Badenoch said people can choose clothes, but workplaces can set dress codes. The Muslim Council of Britain disagreed with her views.
