

The government plans to spend money on the NHS and defence. Some think it's good; others worry about the cost.

The plan may cost a lot. Taxes might rise. Police and Home Office may get less money. People worry about crime and safety.

The government wants to improve the country without cutting spending. But people worry about how money will be managed in the future.