

More people can get the winter fuel payment this year. It helps with energy bills in cold months. Last year, it was only for people on pension credit.

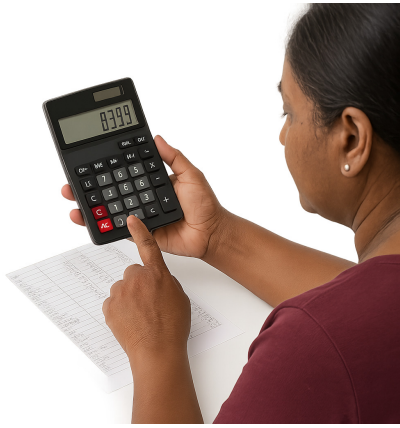

The government hasn't said who gets the payment yet. They want to help those in need. Some people worry about high energy costs.

The payment is up to £300. People under 80 get £200, and people over 80 get £300. The government wants to make it fair for everyone.

In Scotland, people on certain benefits will get the payment. Others will get £100. The UK government is still deciding how to make the changes.

The government will soon decide how to spend money. Some departments might not get all the money they want.
