

Some in the Democratic Party want younger leaders. Current leaders like Joe Biden and Jim Clyburn are older, which some think affects election chances.

Joe Biden won a vote in South Carolina with Jim Clyburn's help. Now, people worry about his health because he has cancer. Some think he should have stepped down.

Young people want to be leaders. They have new ideas and energy. Some are already trying to replace older leaders.

People at a big event said winning elections is important. They want young people to help. Working together is key.

Democrats lost elections and want to win again. They need to fix changes by Republicans and talk about winning back voters.

The next election in South Carolina is important. People are debating experience versus youth, which will shape the party's future.