

Why Taxes Might Go Up

Productivity is how much work is done in an hour. If it doesn't increase, the government might have less money and may need to raise taxes.

Since 2010, the UK has made things more slowly. This is slower than before and other countries. Reasons include less money and changes like Brexit.

The government thought things would improve, but now they're unsure. They might need to ask people to pay more taxes to have enough money.