

The Scotland Office and Scottish Chambers of Commerce are helping Scottish women in business sell more in Spain.

16 women from food, tech, and travel will meet Spanish business people to sell Scottish products and help women in business exports.

Minister Kirsty McNeill supports women leading in trade. She wants more connections in other countries to help grow the economy and create jobs.

A deal with the EU helps sell Scottish goods like whisky and seafood in Europe. The trip aims to find more ways to sell in Spain.

The trip will help Scotland and Spain be friends. There will be a lunch for businesswomen and meetings with Spanish leaders.