

New NHS Film Helps with Medicine

A new NHS film called STOMP helps people with learning disabilities and autism stop taking too much medicine. Made with patients' help.

STOMP helps people in Durham and Teesside by safely lowering medicine doses. Many have seen good changes. The film will be shared with pharmacists.

Anne-Marie from Stockton feels happier after a medicine review. The project won awards and shows people they have choices. Films are on the website.