

Disabled People Were Ignored in Pandemic

During COVID-19, disabled people in care homes were at high risk. Many died, and groups said the system failed to help them.

Care services were not planned well. Staff spread the virus. Some rights were taken from disabled people. Councils did not follow rules.

Disability Rights UK says poor planning led to deaths. They urge the government to learn and improve care for disabled people.