

A man was banned from being a boss for 11 years. His company owed investors over £10 million after losing a lot of money.

The company took over £1.5 million, promising 20% returns from football bets. But there's no proof they used the money for this.

The company lost money. Brian Bentley was banned for six years for misleading investors and not paying them back.

The Insolvency Service is closing the company. Alan Bentley needs court permission to manage a company. Bosses must be honest with investors.
