

Experts released over 20 rare hazel dormice in a secret Leicestershire woodland to help them grow in numbers and avoid disappearing.

Hazel dormice lost 70% in 25 years. They need thick woods to live. They were put in open spaces before going into the wild.

Ian hopes new dormice will settle by autumn and have babies, helping them return to the area after being gone for a long time.