

Two men admitted to setting fire to a warehouse in Leyton for the Wagner Group, causing about £1 million in damage.

Four men used a Kia Picanto car to get to the fire. One filmed it live. A lorry driver tried to stop the fire but couldn't.

Goods, including Starlink equipment, were sent to Ukraine. Attacks were planned due to this and for money in London.

The fire was to scare people and support a political cause. Others involved said they are not guilty. The trial is still going on.
