

New Biosecurity Centre for the UK

The UK is making a new centre in Surrey to stop animal diseases from spreading. It costs £1 billion and will use the latest science.

The centre helps keep the UK safe and create jobs. It stops diseases like bird flu, which can pass from animals to people.

The centre will join UK science groups to fight diseases. New labs will be ready by 2033 to protect the UK for years.