

Help for Young Home Buyers

The Conservatives want to give young people £5,000 for their first home when they start a full-time job. This is called a "first-job bonus."

The party plans to cut £47bn by reducing welfare, civil servant jobs, and aid. They also want to change benefits for some mental health issues.

The party wants to show they manage money well. They want to be better than others. Some think cutting the aid budget is a bad idea.
