

From 2026, you can book self-driving cars with an app. They won't need a driver. This is a big step for the UK and may make roads safer.

The UK will test self-driving cars by spring 2026. These cars will work like taxis or buses without a driver.

By 2035, self-driving cars might create 38,000 jobs and add £42 billion to the UK economy.

Self-driving cars are meant to be safe like humans. They don't get tired or distracted, which helps stop accidents.

Self-driving cars can help people get around more easily. They can offer new transport options in the countryside and help people who can't drive.

The UK is a leader in self-driving cars. Companies like Wayve and Oxa work on them. This could bring more money and make travel better.
