

Australia lost to South Africa. Next, they play in the West Indies and then against England in the Ashes series.

Australia's captain, Pat Cummins, says they need to think about team changes before the first game in the West Indies to be ready.

Some players might change because they didn't play well. Usman Khawaja needs to score more runs to stay in the team.

The team needs to choose the best players to start batting. They have tried different players and have three games to decide.

Nathan Lyon didn't take any wickets in the last game. Some think he might not be as good in short games. Australia might try a different bowler.

Australia's fast bowlers are getting older. They need strong new players ready to step in. This is important for the team's future.
