

The Scotland Office and Scottish Chambers of Commerce made a deal to help Scottish businesses sell worldwide, boosting the economy.

The UK Government is giving up to £100,000 to show off Scottish products like whisky and seafood and bring more money into Scotland.

Ian Murray and Liz Cameron want to help Scottish businesses find new markets to grow the economy and create jobs.

Some business leaders like the plan. They think it will help sell more products abroad and make Scotland more important. More trade details soon.
