

New Heat Scheme in Wales

Wales opened its first mine water heat scheme in Ammanford. It uses old coal mines for low-carbon energy to heat buildings and help the environment.

The Welsh Government started a plan to use mine water for heat. This helps reduce carbon emissions and creates new jobs.

This project uses mine water for heating, like others in the UK. Old mines can help with clean energy.