

Rachel Reeves plans to spend more money outside London and the south-east. She changed the rules for government spending.

The changes will help the north and Midlands with money for energy projects, roads, and trains, so all areas are treated fairly.

Reeves wants fair rules for public spending to help areas that need more support, not just richer ones.

Keir Starmer says the Reform party is a challenge for Labour in the north. He shared his money problems to connect and plans to help areas needing investment.
