

Worries About School Help for SEND Kids

People are worried about changes to help for children with special needs. Parents and carers are scared about what this means for their kids.

The Education Secretary wants more SEND children in regular schools, but there are worries about losing legal rights and support.

Save Our Children's Rights wants to keep children's rights. They say the government should help, not make life harder for children and families.