

The UK Government is changing workers' rights to help people earn more and feel safer at work. This aims to make the UK a better place to work.

The Employment Rights Bill will stop unfair work, like zero-hours contracts, and give workers more rights, like sick pay and protection.

The UK wants people to have a better life. Changes will help people spend more in shops and support small businesses.