

South Korea stopped using loudspeakers to talk to North Korea to be friends again. The new president, Lee Jae-myung, wants to talk more.

Some worry stopping broadcasts means less support for North Korea. But people near the border are happy as the noise was very loud.

The loudspeakers can be used again if needed. They were stopped to help make peace. The countries have not signed a peace deal since 1953.