

Australia has a deal with the US and UK for new submarines to stay safe. But there are worries the US might change its mind.

The Aukus deal gives Australia new submarines to stay safe. The US and UK want to help Australia.

The US is rethinking a deal. Some in the US want to keep their submarines, which worries Australia.

Australia's leaders are sure the deal will happen. But some Australians worry the US might not help them as much as before.

Some think Australia can stay safe without the US. Being far from other places helps keep Australia safe.

If the US changes the deal, Australia may need new partners. They have choices, but it needs time and planning. Australia must decide what to do next.

Australia, the US, and the UK want to work together to keep the Asia-Pacific area safe. They need to decide the best way to do this.
