

The BBC website uses cookies to help you. Some cookies are always on, others you can choose to turn on or off.

Scotland's football team drew 2-2 with Iceland at Hampden Park. Fans felt it was a repeat of past games and were disappointed.

Scotland's coach, Steve Clarke, helped the team reach finals. They lost to Iceland, raising questions about their future and Clarke's contract.

Cieran Slicker, a young goalie, had a tough game. He made mistakes after replacing Angus Gunn. The team found it hard to score and defend.

Scotland's players need to get better fast. More games are coming, and fans want wins. Clarke aims for the World Cup, but it's tough.

Scotland will play Liechtenstein next. Coach Clarke wants to help the team win. The team and fans hope for better results soon.