

Fewer Learning Disability Nurses

There are fewer learning disability nurses in England. This is a problem because people might not get help. Not enough students want to be nurses.

The RCN wants the government to spend more on nurse training and give money to help people study nursing. This will help get and keep more nurses.

Mencap says special nurses are important for people with learning disabilities. The government plans to have more nurses by next summer.