

Steve Reed thanked National Trust staff and volunteers. He loves Sissinghurst Castle in Kent for its beautiful gardens.

The National Trust helps nature by making homes for birds and frogs and stopping floods. We need more projects like this.

The Government plans to clean rivers and seas, plant trees, make parks, stop pollution, and help birds and wildlife.

The UK is making new rules to keep sea life safe. They are working with other countries to help the oceans be healthy again.

The National Trust is trying new ways to care for land in the Peak District to help trees, animals, and people enjoy it more.

Steve says working together helps nature. The Government wants to be the best for nature and is excited to work with the National Trust.
