

New Training for Health Staff

The UK has new training rules for health staff on learning disabilities and autism, called the Oliver McGowan Mandatory Training.

The training has 3 levels. All staff must learn the basics. People with learning disabilities or autism should help make the training.

Oliver's parents want better care in health and social services to stop problems like the ones Oliver faced.