

Many in the US protested against Trump. "No Kings" led the protests. They were upset about a military parade and immigration rules.

The parade celebrated the US Army's 250th birthday and Trump's birthday. Trump warned protests would face "heavy force," but many still protested.

The protests were in many cities like Los Angeles, New York, and Philadelphia. People were unhappy about Trump's immigration policies and public.

In Los Angeles, people protested against family separations. Trump sent the National Guard, causing anger, but some still support his policies.

The parade had soldiers, tanks, and fireworks. Some thought it cost too much, others saw it as thanks to soldiers. It showed a divided country.
