

Pig Farmer Fined for Pollution

A farmer let pig slurry spill into a stream in Somerset. He built a lagoon without permission, it overflowed, and he was fined over £5,000.

The Environment Agency found an illegal lagoon at Orchard Farm. James helped stop the spill and built a roof to prevent future pollution.

The Environment Agency helps farmers store slurry safely. They remind them to follow rules. James Mitchell was charged for not following them.