

The UK government is planning how to use money to help the economy grow.

Some think the government is too slow. They need to support big projects like green factories to help the country and make more money.

The government will spend more money on roads and railways. This is more than they have spent in many years.

They want to use money for new science ideas and a train line between Liverpool and Manchester to help the country grow.

The government must choose which projects to spend money on to help the country grow.

COVID-19 has made life tough. People need more help, but there's not enough money. The government must be careful with spending.
