

Health Survey Shows Big Differences

The Health Counts survey shows people in poorer areas have worse health than in richer areas. It also looked at smoking, exercise, and happiness.

Over 16,500 people joined a survey on health, feelings, and drug use. It also asked about gambling and hate crimes to help improve city health plans.

37% had a healthy weight, 25% were obese. Some used drugs not from a doctor, and some had gambling problems. The survey helps understand health needs.
