

Josh and Hannah saved six people, including four children, after a boat exploded on the River Thames. They were on holiday.

A loud explosion brought people to help. Police called it a "miracle" that no one died. Nine went to hospital; two, including a baby, were badly hurt.

The couple acted bravely and quickly to help people who couldn't swim. Their actions saved lives, and the police thanked them.