

Farm visitors in the UK are warned about cryptosporidium. This germ can cause tummy problems if you touch animals or surfaces with animal poo.

Some farms broke safety rules. People got sick from touching poorly animals. Farms must keep things clean, especially on Open Farm Sunday.

Some people get sick after visiting farms. Emily's son got very ill after touching animals and had to go to hospital.

Farm events help make money, but some farms are not safe. Inspectors found dirt and no proper handwashing places.

Farm organisers help keep farms safe. They train farmers and remind visitors to wash hands and stay safe.