

Spending Review: What It Means for Us

Rachel Reeves' review: More money for health, social care, and schools. More doctors and appointments. Help closer to home.

The government will spend more on care for children and adults. They want to help kids stay with families and make care homes better.

Schools get more money. Changes will help children with special needs. Money will fix schools and help young people train. Housing plans need details.