

In Colombia, children are forced to join armed groups and do bad things. This happens in cities and countryside areas.

A 15-year-old boy shot a politician for money. Many children in poor areas are forced into crime to help their families.

In the past, groups used children for risky jobs. Today, new groups still do this and use TikTok to find them.

In 2024, 409 children joined these groups. The real number might be higher. Many come from places with weak government.

Children in these areas are at risk. The government must do more to help and protect them. It's important to keep children safe.
