

Smoke from Canada wildfires turned the UK sky orange. The smoke travelled 4,000 miles across the Atlantic. People saw it on Saturday and Sunday.

Smoke makes the sun look orange by blocking blue light. The smoke is too high to affect the air we breathe in the UK.

More smoke on Monday might change the sky. By midweek, the wind will stop smoke, but Sahara dust might change the sky instead.