

The UK wants more jobs and skills for local people. Companies must help locals when working on big projects like roads and schools.

The government will spend money on new projects to give local people jobs and training. This is part of the Infrastructure Strategy.

New rules help check companies' promises. They must show plans for apprenticeships and training to help people get jobs and skills.