

Belfast people supported migrants after violence. Signs said "refugees are welcome" and "diversity makes us stronger."

Two men were charged for causing trouble. People from ethnic backgrounds are scared and staying home. Some miss English classes due to fear.

People feel sad and scared. Northern Ireland should be welcoming again. Violence makes people question if they want to stay.

Police used water cannons in Portadown to stop violence. Rioters threw petrol bombs. A hotel and car were damaged. Police are trying to catch them.

Deputy Mayor Paul Doherty wants the police to stop violence. Children are asking why people hate them. Police are finding those causing trouble.