

Helping People in South Sudan

Since February, 165,000 people in South Sudan have left home due to fighting. They face less food and more sickness, like cholera.

The UN needs £36 million for food, water, and health care. They want the fighting to stop to keep people safe.

In Warrap state, South Sudan, fighting over cattle has hurt many. The UN is trying to help, but armed groups make it hard to reach some places.
