

Alice works part-time to spend more time with her baby, Oliver. She believes flexible work can help keep teachers in their jobs.

The UK needs more teachers. They promise more pay, but fewer people want to be teachers, especially in maths and science.

Sam loves teaching but finds it busy. Many teachers leave for better balance. Schools in poor areas struggle to hire, so students miss key subjects.

Dan Botting's school struggles to find computing teachers. They retrain staff and want to hire teachers who will stay and support students.

Teachers need more help and flexible work. This keeps them in schools and helps students learn well. The government and schools are working on this.