

The UK is giving Scotland £9.1 billion for public services and jobs, especially in clean energy, with investments in Aberdeen and Inverness.

Scotland will get money for new ideas and research. A supercomputer will be built in Edinburgh. More money will help local projects and communities.

The government is giving money to help Scottish businesses grow, including a sustainable packaging company near Glasgow.

Scotland will get more money for the NHS and schools. This is the most since 1998. It will help people and local decisions are key for growth.

The UK Government helps Scotland sell more goods worldwide by promoting Scottish products.