

Exercise like walking or dancing can help people with colon cancer live longer. It may change how doctors treat colon cancer.

People who exercised after chemo stayed cancer-free more often. 80% of them stayed cancer-free, compared to 74% who didn't exercise.

Exercise can help people live longer. It might work by helping growth hormones and the immune system. This could change cancer care.