

The UK will spend £14.2 billion on Sizewell C in Suffolk, making jobs and powering six million homes. Some think it's too costly.

Sizewell C will take over 10 years to build. It may help with clean energy, but some worry it will raise bills. Money decisions are not final yet.

300 people protested against Sizewell C. They want the money spent on other things. Talks with investors about funding are ongoing.

The government is spending on projects like fusion energy and defence to plan for the UK's future and energy needs.
