

The English rugby league, the Premiership, will be called the Gallagher Prem next season. A new orange logo will be used at games and on TV.

The league will share exciting player moments on YouTube and social media to attract young fans and make more money.

The Prem may become a franchise with no relegation if teams meet standards. The Rugby Football Union supports this, but it needs approval.